Medical Malpractice Defense

Wooden McLaughlin lawyers have partnered for decades with our health care colleagues to defend them in liability claims. Successful representation of physicians, nurses, dentists, hospitals, nursing homes, and other allied providers demands more than just excellent legal skills and experience. Working with our healthcare colleagues requires our attorneys to bring together an array of skills and experience, including knowledge of medical terminology and procedures, an understanding of the inherent day-to-day challenges facing healthcare providers, and the ability to learn complex medicine case after case. When our healthcare clients are sued, professional performance is questioned and professional reputations are at risk. Our attorneys understand what is at stake and work relentlessly to defend our healthcare clients at every stage of litigation, including Medical Review Panel proceedings, mediations, arbitrations, and jury trials.
